Biography

Janet A. Dalquist spent her youth in Menominee, where she studied the piano for ten years and the organ for two. Her degree from Macalester College included a music minor with an emphasis on organ performance. During her forty years as a librarian, she gave little time to the organ aside from occasional substitutions for musicians at Houghton churches. In 1989, following her retirement from librarianship, she returned to full-time work as an organist at Portage Lake United Church, stepping down to half-time in 1992.

Dalquist served as a co-coordinator of the Organists of Keweenaw, an informal group dedicated to camaraderie among local organists, study of organs and organ performance, and education and outreach on the instrument. Her involvement included the organization of organ workshops and recitals at Pine Mountain Music Festival (PMMF) for a number of years.

In addition to performing on organs in Houghton, Keweenaw, and Ontonagon counties, Dalquist conducted historical and technical research on some instruments in the area. Her work appeared in an article for The Diapason, a magazine for organists and organ builders, and in a short book on organs located in Houghton County.
